

Everything to Live For: A High School Writing Project that Changed Lives

In the wake of a tragic school shooting, a group of high school students came together to write a book about their experiences. The book, "Everything to Live For," is a powerful and moving account of the students' lives, their hopes, and their dreams. It is a story of resilience, hope, and the power of words.

The School Shooting

On February 14, 2018, a gunman opened fire at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School in Parkland, Florida. Seventeen people were killed and seventeen others were injured. The shooting was one of the deadliest school shootings in American history.

In the aftermath of the shooting, the students of Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School were left reeling. They had lost friends and classmates, and they were struggling to cope with the trauma of what they had experienced.

The Writing Project

In the midst of their grief, the students of Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School found solace in writing. They began to write about their experiences, their hopes, and their dreams. Their writing was a way for them to process their emotions and to make sense of what had happened.

The students' writing was so powerful that their teacher, Lori Alhadeff, decided to compile it into a book. The book, "Everything to Live For," was published in 2019. It is a collection of essays, poems, and artwork by the students of Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School.

The Impact of the Book

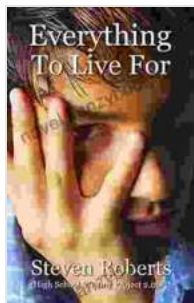

"Everything to Live For" has had a profound impact on the students of Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School and on people all over the world. The book has been praised for its honesty, its courage, and its hope. It has been used in schools and communities across the country to help people understand the impact of gun violence and to promote healing and resilience.

The students of Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School are an inspiration to us all. They have shown us that even in the darkest of times, there is always hope. Their writing is a testament to the power of words and the importance of sharing our stories.
